

Military Toronto – World War II – Naval Post Office

The Navy also had a presence in Toronto – called the HMCS York. Locations like this were called “Stone Frigates”.

HMCS York was created in 1942 to replace a navy volunteer reserve. During WW2 it was the premier recruiting base in the Commonwealth and over 17,000 recruits passed through the W facility.

Today it serves as a Naval Reserve Division employing around 200 naval personnel.
